

The introductory frame-story 1

You are a project manager. In the middle of the most hectic phase of a project, you find that members of your project team take on responsibilities beyond their job roles to ensure the team's work progresses. At the same time, they are working more closely together and often ask you for advice too. They recognise that this phase is notoriously busy, but essential to the success of the project and the business. They know that success will be noticed and celebrated and that there will come a time when they can recharge their resources in many ways.

Live in the moment and write a (one-page) story,

- how it got to this point
- how this all will affect your actions and your ways to apply responsible leadership approach
- what you as a project manager will do next

Use whole sentences when writing this narrative.

This frame-story is based on the method of empathy-based stories (MEBS)